

Abstract

The current research examined the factors affecting the judgment of sexual orientation using nonverbal cues. Sexual orientation of targets were judged by 58 participants based on a muted 10s video clip. An interaction was found between targets' gender and targets' sexual orientation for the sexual orientation judgment. i.e., gay men were rated as more likely to be homosexuals than lesbians and heterosexuals (both male and female).