

ABSTRACT

There are numerous challenges in evolving globe, for example facing dilemma in career life during the threat of Pandemic COVID. In the presence of different dare, some of the people could successfully overcome and rebound from the adversity and evolve into a more suitable form. In this project, we are going to investigate the career related personality properties that enhancing entrepreneurs and employees to cope with threats brought by COVID-19. It was thought to be important as the personality trait is relative stable for coordinating behavioral performance and regulate emotion. The self-empowerment of resilience and adaptability is believed to help people through different difficulties throughout their lives.

Although it was shown in the findings that there is slightly negative correlation between independent variables career resilience, career adaptability and target dependent variable COVID career anxiety. The result is a bit distance from being significant. The reasons were taken into account before further investigation of relationship of personal proactive factors and the reflection of performance.